The Little Brown Bat is one of the most commonly seen bats in the United States. It weighs around 8 grams and its wingspan is about 8 inches.

The brown bat likes to make its home in attics and barns, and either migrates or hibernates in the winter months.

The Little Brown Bat's diet consists mainly of insects. It can eat 100% of its own body weight in insects every night! That is a lot of mosquitoes! The bat finds its food using Echolocation.
